Book larnin' fad sweeps through campus

By Pat McCrotch
Sometimes Writer

I have long since been fascinated by writings of important people. Writings of importance. Like writings on the wall in the cafeteria. But I did not tell any of my friends about my fascination with these artistic writings such as: "At least, please wear underwear while coming into the cafeteria."

One day, at night, I had a nightmare. A book was chasing me. It was a big book with many, many words. One word that kept jumping out of the book had the letters: "tionary." Another word that was also screaming was "weens." I was so scared because I thought I was dead. I woke up sweating. And I was happy that I was alive.

When I looked under my bed to get my underwear, I noticed something that looked like a brick. I pulled it out and it had dust on it. I recognized some of the letters on it like the ones from my nightmare before. For my dear readers, I will spell out the letters on the book after I removed the dust on it: Dictionary

I opened the inside. There was so many pictures and words that I was amazed. The words started from A. I would like to mention all the words but at this point, I am getting tired of typing. Plus I have other things to report to you, my dear reader.

So I spent a few hours looking at all these words and pictures till I came to the pages that have lots of D's. And I saw that word again, the Dictionary word. I decided to read what came after the word and it basically said it was a book that talked about words. Can you

This week University [sic] Cablevision will be running a special U[sic]GA only edition of the popular, swinger-friendly television sensation, Trading Spouses: Interspecies Edition. The show, entitled Trading Spouses: Interspecies Edition features our own Cletus McHickname and his lovely new bride Puggles, a three-year-old black lab.

When asked about the upcoming episode, McHickname said, "I don't know what I'm gonna do without Puggles for a week. I really don't think I'll be able to convince anyone else to do that thing with the peanut butter."

Puggles had this to say: "Yip Yip. Bark!" And then she began to vigorously lick her own crotch.

The second couple involved in the episode, Mr. and Mrs. Smithson of Ptemke, AZ was unavailable for comment owing to their repeated, failed attempts at suicide having rendered them both comatose.

When reached for comment about their counterparts' sorry state, McHickname and Puggles said, "Sweet, I've always had a thing for girls that didn't move," and, "Woof," respectively.

Trading Spouses: Interspecies Edition airs this Sunday at 9:00 p.m. on channel 21.

Harry Potter: tool of the devil since '97

Jesus H. Feingold
Totally Blasphemous

The buzz for Harry Potter has returned with his new movie, Harry Potter and the Goblet of Fire. Recently, Harry Potter granted an interview to talk about his fame and his recent movie.

"If you were to ask me several years ago if I was to be this famous I would have replied 'Without a doubt,'" Potter commented. "My master promised me over a decade ago when I was a mere scribble on a napkin that I would be used to bring his message to the world."

The most recent movie is the fourth installment of the master plan.

"My master decided that movies would be necessary to get the message to the illiterate and generally mentally deficient of the world," Pottersaid. Potter

"[My books are] a magical Mein Kampf, if you will."

imagine that?

So I ran outside, overwhelmed with joy at my finding, forgetting that I did not want any of my friends to know that I liked letters and words and things like that. When I saw my friends, I ended up telling them about the book. We all started looking at the things in the book together.

In fact, I used it to write this article that I am writing right now as you are reading. Some days, we spend five or six hours reading this dictionary book.

I am happy to announce that we are in the pages that have mostly Gs. I have to go back to the reading session we are having now. In conclusion, reading is a very fun thing to do and everyone should read all the time because it is really awesome and neat. I love reading. And squirrels. I love squirrels too.

feels that the movies are somewhat unnecessary since the books fully lay out the message and are further along than the movies.

"Everything my master plans to do is perfectly laid out in my books," Potter said. "A magical Mein Kampf, if you will. We're both very excited about everything."

Potter acknowledged that underneath the innocent front of child play and Halloweenesque fun, a darker side is present in both the movies and the books. The books, which have already enslaved the immortal souls of thousands of unsuspecting readers, are huge multinational best-sellers and have been translated into many languages.

The full extent of the message will not be understood until the final installment of the books and, for the illiterate and retarded, movies is released.

"It gives the readers a reason to keep buying the books even though the initial awe of a boy wizard has faded slightly," said Potter.

Evangelists, who have been preaching the dark side of the Harry Potter since the initial book was released, now feel vindicated, though their pleas still fall on deaf ears.

The message has already captured the minds of the public beyond repair. If crazed bible thumpers and the threat of hellfire and eternal damnation cannot sway the brainwashed masses of Harry Potter addicts, sadly, nothing can.

"Basically, we're taunting them," said Potter. "I mean, what are they gonna do? Nothing, that's what. 'The meek shall inherit the earth,' my ass. All the meek are getting is a swift kick to the teeth. Damned meek."

"Once the final movie has been made and the entire world has heard my master's message the long-awaited apocalypse can finally begin," said Potter with a sinister grin.

Students try to have fun without alcohol, fail

By Urmoms Ahore
Drunk Off His Ass

As part of an ongoing attempt to not wake up in the morning with other peoples' underpants on their heads, students of U[sic]GA have lately been attempting to have a good time without alcohol. These attempts have met universally with failure.

"I guess I never really noticed how foul beer tasted until I stopped being too drunk to care after just a few," said Drew McClemlson, fourth-year Excremental Engineering major, when asked about the taste of non-alcoholic beer. "The stuff tastes like piss. How could I never have noticed before?" said McClemlson before giving the keg a disappointed look.

The general consensus among students is that activities which once were great fun are now pale imitations of their former selves. Missy Hobagge, a third year Home Economics major, had this to say on the subject. "I used to love getting wasted and hooking up with tons of random guys, but now that my conscious mind isn't deadened beyond the capacity to function, I'm forced to actually face just how pathetic the whole thing is, and that totally kills the fun of my shamelessly whorish ways."

Beyond interfering with being a slut, other activities that lose their luster in the harsh light of sobriety include streaking, exhibitionist female on female make out sessions, and beer pong, which, regardless of the official line being put out by the Budweiser people, is generally regarded as being not even sort of fun with just water.

Even activities not directly related to drinking aren't very much fun. "Were you aware that football is actually a horribly boring game to watch?" said John Johnsonsen, a third year Leisure Studies freshman.

Disappointed students gather around a keg of O'Douls, a non-alcoholic beer, wondering why the parties just aren't as much fun now that nobody's getting black out drunk and taking their tops off anymore.

"They just run up and down the field hitting each other. Why would anyone want to watch that crap sober?"

Sobriety has also been taking its toll on students in other ways. "I haven't missed a class in five weeks," said McClemlson.

"It's been awful. Do you know what an excremental engineer is actually supposed to do? 'Cause I sure as hell didn't until about three weeks ago. I just picked it 'cause the name sounded cool."

While, as of this writing, the sobriety fad is still going strong, most students agree that it's on its last legs. "I, for one, can't wait to get back to drinking myself retarded," said Missy Hobagge.
