Ivan Allen Jr. Prize for Social Courage Honors Local Pioneers

DENISE WARD
INSTITUTE COMMUNICATIONS

Charlayne Hunter-Gault and the late Hamilton Holmes have been named recipients of Georgia Tech's 2020 Ivan Allen Jr. Prize for Social Courage, which will be presented on Wednesday, Feb. 5.

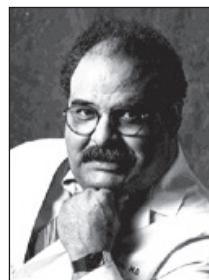

The prize honors those who have made a positive difference by standing up for moral principle at the risk of their careers, livelihoods, and even their lives. Holmes and Hunter-Gault, both Atlanta natives, showed significant courage by enrolling as the first African American students at the University of Georgia (UGA) — in the era of Jim Crow. Both awardees went on to lead courageous, inspirational lives as role models in their fields of medicine and journalism.

Holmes was an orthopedic surgeon in Atlanta. He was also the first African American student admitted to the Emory University School of Medicine, where he earned his medical degree in 1967. He completed his residency at Emory after serving in the military and later became an associate dean. Additionally, he worked as chief of orthopedics at the Atlanta Veterans Administration hospital, in private practice, and as chairman of orthopedic surgery at Grady Memorial Hospital.

Holmes died at his home in Atlanta in 1995. He left a lasting legacy in the city, with several Atlanta landmarks named in his honor, including Hamilton E. Holmes Elementary School, Hamilton E. Holmes Drive, and the H.E. Holmes MARTA station.

completing a brief interest form. If a strategic match is available, the employee will be notified they have been paired.

Registration is open now until Jan. 20 at hr.gatech.edu/mentortech.

The program is designed to accommodate a participant's diverse needs and match those needs based on interest in one of the following categories: General Career Guidance, Work/Life Transitions, Career Sponsorship, and Technical Competency.

Throughout the six-month partnership, mentors and mentees will have access to a wealth of resources to support and enrich the professional partnership, including development opportunities and career guidance.

MentorTech has accepted and paired more than 250 mentors and mentees who have invested more than 2,000 hours.

“My mentoring experience was equally beneficial and fulfilling, and it allowed me to reflect on my personal experiences and consider my own lessons learned to help advance, to encourage, and to motivate my mentee,” said Will Jimerson, a 2019 MentorTech participant.

All faculty and staff are encouraged to step out of their comfort zone and into a customized experience designed to elevate horizons and strengthen leadership skills.

Hunter-Gault is an award-winning journalist and author. She has worked as a reporter for The New Yorker, The New York Times, and PBS NewsHour, where she currently contributes to the “Race Matters” series looking at solutions to racism. She has also worked as Africa correspondent for National Public Radio and South Africa bureau chief for CNN. Hunter-Gault has received numerous awards for journalism, including two national news and documentary Emmy Awards and two George Foster Peabody Awards.

She has also been recognized by numerous organizations, including the National Urban Coalition and American Women in Radio and Television. She was named Journalist of the Year by the National Association of Black Journalists and received the Washington Press Club Foundation’s 2015 Lifetime Achievement Award. In 2015, Hunter-Gault was also inducted into the Atlanta Press Club Hall of Fame.

The Ivan Allen Jr. Prize will be presented during a daylong series of events, starting with a symposium at the Biltmore Ballrooms in Tech Square. The symposium is open to the public and will focus on how personal courage influences social impact and creates inspirational role models for the next generation.

The symposium will be moderated by Marian Alexis Scott, veteran Atlanta journalist and publisher. Panelists will include:

Charlayne Hunter-Gault (left), an award-winning journalist and author, gave the keynote address at the 10th Annual Diversity Symposium in 2018. Hunter-Gault is one of two recipients of the 2020 Ivan Allen Jr. Prize for Social Courage.

- Jim Bootle, son of Judge William Bootle, who issued the ruling that admitted Holmes and Hunter-Gault to UGA.
- Tom Johnson, journalist and former CNN president.
- Arthur Yancey, a retired faculty member in the Emory University School of Medicine and practicing emergency physician at Grady Memorial Hospital, an Emergency Medical Services medical director for Fulton County, and deputy director for Emergency Medical Services in the Fulton County Department of Health and Wellness.
- Valerie Boyd, UGA professor and the Charlayne Hunter-Gault Distinguished Writer in Residence.
- Steve CarMichael Jones, United States district judge of the United States District Court for the Northern District of Georgia and a former Georgia Superior Court judge.
- Michelle Garfield Cook, vice provost for Diversity and Inclusion and Strategic University Initiatives, and chief diversity officer

The day also includes an invitation-only awards luncheon and student-only town hall forum with Hunter-Gault in the Student Center Theater.

The inaugural Ivan Allen Jr. Prize in Social Courage was awarded in 2011 to former Sen. Sam Nunn. Past recipients include former U.S. President Jimmy Carter and first lady Rosalynn Carter, U.S. Rep. John Lewis, humanitarian activist Nancy Parrish, and former Congressman Andrew Young. The award is named for Georgia Tech alumnus and former Atlanta Mayor Ivan Allen Jr., after whom Georgia Tech’s Ivan Allen College of Liberal Arts is also named. It is funded in perpetuity by a grant from the Wilbur and Hilda Glenn Family Foundation. This year’s recipients will share a $100,000 prize. FACULTY AND STAFF ACHIEVEMENTS

Azadeh Ansari, assistant professor and Sutterfield Family Junior Professor in the School of Electrical and Computer Engineering, has been named a recipient of the National Science Foundation CAREER Award.

School of Computational Science and Engineering Associate Professor Polo Chau received the 2019 Outstanding Researcher Award from Intel, honoring his innovations in artificial intelligence and security, and for his contributions to the Intel Science and Technology Center for Adversary-Resilient Security Analytics (ISTC-ARSA) at Georgia Tech. The award is given annually to recognize researchers across scientific disciplines who have demonstrated exceptional innovation for work related to Intel initiatives.

Stanislav Emelianov, jointly appointed professor in the Wallace H. Coulter Department of Biomedical Engineering and School of Electrical and Computer Engineering, was named an IEEE Fellow. Emelianov was recognized by IEEE “for contributions to ultrasound elasticity and photoacoustic imaging.”

Ashok Goel, professor in the School of Interactive Computing, earned the 2020 Regents Award for the Scholarship of Teaching and Learning from the University System of Georgia’s Board of Regents. Donald Webster, Karen and John Huff Chair of the School of Civil and Environmental Engineering, has been selected as the recipient of the 2020 Felton Jenkins Jr. Hall of Fame Faculty Award. Both will be honored at the Regents Scholarship Gala on Feb. 21.

Martha Grover, professor and associate chair for graduate studies in the School of Chemical and Biomolecular Engineering, was awarded one of six national Faculty Mentor of the Year awards at the 26th annual Institute on Teaching and Mentoring in October. The Institute is the nation’s largest annual gathering of underrepresented Ph.D. students and college faculty members of color.

Robert Knotts, director of Federal Relations for Government and Community Relations, earned the 2019 AAU Leadership Award. Knotts was honored for outstanding leadership and achievement on the issue of science and security. He will be honored at a ceremony this month.

Aaron Levine, associate professor in the School of Public Policy, was recently elected to the board of the American Society of Bioethics and Humanities, the primary academic organization in the U.S. for scholars and practitioners working in clinical ethics, research ethics, and the health humanities. During a three-year term, Levine is serving as a director at-large.

Natalie Stingelin, professor with joint appointments in the School of Chemical and Biomolecular Engineering and School of Materials Science and Engineering, has been named editor-in-chief for the Royal Society of Chemistry’s Journal of Materials Chemistry C, a weekly peer-reviewed scientific journal covering the properties, applications, and synthesis of new materials related to optical, magnetic, and electronic devices.

Eric M. Vogel, professor of Materials Science and Engineering, deputy director of the Institute for Electronics and Nanotechnology, and associate director for Shared Resources of the Institute for Materials, has been inducted into the North Carolina State University School of Electrical and Computer Engineering Alumni Hall of Fame. The honor celebrates outstanding graduates who have used their education to excel in a profession, career, or service. Vogel received his Ph.D. in electrical engineering from North Carolina State University in 1998.

Gleb Yushin, professor in the School of Materials Science and Engineering, has been elected as a National Academy of Inventors Fellow. Yushin was chosen for demonstrating a highly prolific spirit of innovation in creating or facilitating outstanding inventions that have made a tangible impact on the quality of life, economic development, and welfare of society.
