

BALLIN'

To Hell with Georgia • Tuesday, November 26, 2002

Wrasslin News

Did you see how Bubba got a black eye? Find out who done it and why they decided he needed a smack down. Page 27

Dem Gators

Dem Gators gone 'n ruined ar season 'gain. Damn dem Gators. I will kill Sprrrierr. Even doh he in da NFL. Page 26

by the numbers
750

Average SAT score for this year's incoming freshman football signees. This is a full 10 points higher than last year's class. Good job, boys. Sic'em.

217,182

Number of times, on average, a typical U(sic)GA game-day crowd will bark, growl or drool on themselves while watchin our boys whoop it up on the gridiron. Go Dawgs!

314,159,262

Average number of beers consumed on game day by U(sic)GA fans. This number includes faculty members, Greek students and independent students, as well as the drunk alumni—that means graduates—who will never make it out of Athens.

Southern Brawl to be held in Atlanta

Agriculture project mistake leads to U(sic)GA - Tech game moving to Bobby Dodd, Sanford Stadium undergoes fertilizer treatments.

Cookie Dough
Just a lil' nibble...

In an embarrassing news conference yesterday, Michael Adams, President of the University (sic) of Georgia, announced that Sanford Stadium would not be available for this year's Georgia-Georgia Tech game due to a planting mistake by a senior agricultural project team.

Five men and three women, all Agriculture majors at U(sic)GA, planted their final project of experimental sweet corn one night earlier in the semester, and now the knee-high shoots are too great a safety liability for football play. The corn is considered extremely dangerous, as part of a U(sic)GA research plan in radioactive vegetables to aid in the capture of Osama bin Laden.

"We figure that Osama loves corn just as much as we do, so now the CIA can track the radioactive kernels all the way to Osama's secret camp, and follow his trail after they move through his digestive system," said Jethro Birchfield, the head research scientist for the Agricultural Department. "We have directed a really big amount of cash towards this here project, money that would have normally gone to our tractor-repair and sport ammunition fund."

"We might be able to attack him from the inside...I mean, literally," Birchfield added. "His insides are going to really hurt after we get done with him. That stuff just has to tear you up, man. You know it's gotta burn coming out."

The project team apologized for their mistake, but justified their experiment as an exercise in patriotism.

"We love America. Yes, we do. We love America, how 'bout you?" said Suzy Stinchcomb, senior project leader and current varsity Dawg cheerleader.

The project team plans to let the

See Corn Dawgs, page 26

By Corns Onmytoes / STUDENT PUBLICATIONS

An agriculture project gone wrong recently took over Sanford Stadium. Bobby Dodd Stadium will host the game while Sanford is re-sodded.

Q&A with Damien Wilkins: Continuing the legacy

THWUGA's own Jed Clampet sits down for a chat with NC State transfer Damien Wilkins to discuss his game, school, teammates, and.... his vocabulary? (Or lack thereof)

By Aussie Redneck / STUDENT PUBLICATIONS

Damien Wilkins, son of Hawks and U(sic)GA legend Dominique Wilkins, is seen here with N.C. State challenging former Jacket Shawn Fein.

Jed Clampet
Ahead of the Game

THWUGA: Damien, thanks for taking the time to sit down with us and answer a few questions.

Damien Wilkins: True.

THWUGA: Outstanding. So how does it feel to be back on the court as a Bulldog?

DW: A lot like it was at State. Only thing is I play for Georgia now. Who let the Dawgs out, baby?! (raises the roof)

THWUGA: Fantastic. So what's it like to follow in your uncle's (Dominique Wilkins) footsteps and suit up for UGA?

DW: Awww, snap! Uncle 'Nique balled here!

THWUGA: Uhh, yeah.

DW: Awww man! (claps and smiles) What'll I tell dad about this [stuff]!

THWUGA: Now, Damien. There was a lot of pressure on you at N.C. State. Why do you feel you struggled so mightily there?

DW: Well, see, I'm a one-man show. And at State they was tryin' to get me to do [stuff], crazy [stuff] like pass the ball and [stuff]. [Messed] up [stuff]. That just took me off my game. (Pause) Sorry, dog, I get a little angry just talkin' about it.

THWUGA: I see. How has the transition to UGA been?

DW: Smooth, yo.

THWUGA: Care to elaborate?

DW: Silky smooth.

THWUGA: Mmm-hmm.

DW: Plus, I get paid here and they wasn't givin' me my money at State.

THWUGA: I beg your pardon?

DW: I mean (clears throat)...I got a campus job.

THWUGA: Uh-huh. It's always nice to see student-athletes working hard in and out of the classroom and the basketball arena.

DW: Yeah (chuckles nervously).

THWUGA: And how are you enjoying class?

DW: Huh?

THWUGA: Class—how's class going?

DW: Oh, it's aight.

THWUGA: I see you are a speech communications major—glad to see it's paying dividends.

DW: Word.

THWUGA: So what are your team and personal goals for this season?

DW: Well, I see myself averaging about 30 points and, God-willing, I'll carry this team all the way to a National Championship.

THWUGA: Well, Damien, you do have a strong returning cast this season: Jarvis Hayes, Ezra Williams, Rashad Wright. You may not have to shoulder the scoring burden as much as you think.

DW: Can I speak connotatively for a minute?

THWUGA: You mean, candidly?

DW: Yeah, candidly.

THWUGA: By all means.

DW: Them guys you just mentioned—they all chumps. I wax all them fools in 1-on-1 every [expletive] day.

THWUGA: I see.

DW: As a matter of fact, this place gonna be renamed "Damien Wilkins University in Augusta" when I'm finished.

THWUGA: We're in Athens, Damien.

DW: I know that, fool! That's what I said.

THWUGA: Magnificent. Well,

See Wilkins, page 26

Uga VI family line is finished

Frank W. (Sonny) Sieler, the owner of the bulldog breed line of Ugas, announced today that the family line has become sterile. The sterilization is a result of intensive interbreeding within the family line that resulted in lowered fertility and diminished intelligence.

This announcement marks the end of an era in college sports. Perhaps the most famous Uga was Uga V who made appearances in the movie "Midnight in the Garden of Good and Evil." He also graced the cover of Sports Illustrated as "Ugliest Dog Alive." No comment was made from Georgia officials as to whether a new line of dog would be established.

Chapel bell is cracked, cannot be repaired

The infamous chapel bell that is rung after a Georgia victory was broken and left unrepairable last week after a group of University of Florida students repeatedly hit it with a sledge hammer. The Florida students had apparently road tripped to Athens after the Dawgs loss in Jacksonville.

U(sic)GA's bell-ringing tradition began the 1890s when the football field was located only yards from the chapel. Students rang the bell in celebration after a big Georgia win and, recently, anytime the Dawgs do anything halfway decent. The bell is usually a five minute walk from the stadium. As it takes inebriated U(sic)GA fans longer to walk to the location, the opposing team's fans often get there quicker, causing uproar and immense confusion.

Wilkins

from page 28

Damien, we have no doubt that you will succeed here at UGA, but the numbers don't lie: less than 35 percent shooting from the floor in ACC competition in two years at N.C. State. Those are dreadful shooting numbers.

DW: Yeah, but what are numbers, anyways? I mean, numbers do not define Damien Wilkins. Damien Wilkins defines numbers.

THWUGA: What in God's holy name does that mean?

DW: Think about it, bro. Think long and hard about what I said. [Shoot], what I just said was prath-etic.

THWUGA: You mean, prophetic?

DW: Why you hasslin' me about my dictatiousness, dog? My vocabulary is endless, like my abilitation on the basketball court. Holla!

THWUGA: Very well. How's your relationship with Coach Harrick?

DW: You questionin' my manhood, Holmes?

THWUGA: What???

DW: What you tryin' to say?

THWUGA: I'm not trying to say anything! I was asking you how you and Coach Harrick get along.

DW: Oh. Well, like I was sayin' earlier. Gettin' paid here at UGA makes my experiences with the program and the coaching staff that much more worthwhile.

THWUGA: And this would be gettin' paid from your campus job...

DW: Yeeeeah, no doubt.

THWUGA: And what exactly does that have to do with Coach Harrick and his staff?

DW: (Stares blankly)

THWUGA: Damien?

DW: Let's talk about my game.

THWUGA: Alright. What do you feel are your strengths?

DW: Well, if I'm isolated in the half-court, one-on-one with some scrub, he's at my mercy. I'll take him inside. I'll take him outside. If I get 35-40 shots a game I can't see us losing.

THWUGA: You don't think that will cause some turmoil with your teammates? Hayes and Williams are going to want their shots, too.

DW: Remember my connotative chump comments earlier?

THWUGA: Ahh, yes. How could I forget?

DW: Damien Wilkins is the offense, the defense, the transition game. It's Damien Wilkins vs. the enemy. I'm just tellin' it like it is.

THWUGA: Marvelous.

“Gettin' paid heremakes my experiences...that much more worthwhile.”

Damien Wikins
U(sic)GA baller

Lastly, Damien, to whom do you feel you owe your success?

DW: Well, I guess I'd like to thank myself.

THWUGA: Oh, brother.

DW: See, I've overcome so much diversity...

THWUGA: (Mutters with face in hands) Adversity...you're killing me.

DW: ...I really couldn't have accomplished all that I have without myself. Damien Wilkins would not allow Damien Wilkins to fail. When all them fools was sayin' I was a bust at State, Damien picked myself up and inspired me to move on and make something of myself.

THWUGA: That was, without a doubt, the most dizzying exhibition of ignorance in speech that I have ever witnessed.

DW: Look I gotta run and get paid. I'll holla at you later, though.

Wrasslin' Notebook

Lesnar goes nuts, Spike and Bubba win

By Igot Bigguns / STUDENT PUBLICATIONS

Recently arm wrasslin' has been going on all over the campus. At any time during the day, students will be doin' it all over Tate. It is easier to do in public than actual wrasslin', and you can do it if yur TV done broke.

By Joe Lee Deere
Loves wraslin', loves his mamma...

Brock Lesnar just lost it last week on SmackDown! and started beatin evrybody up. First he thru Matt Hardy thru a brik wall. Then Stephanie finally told him to stop or be suspindid. But then he beat up Big Show twice befor chasing his agent out ov the bilding.

In other maches, Billy Kidman kept his croozerwate belt by beatin Tajiri. Rikishi won aganst John Cena and Rey Mysterio beat Jamie Noble. The weirdest thing happind win Chris Benoit watcht Kurt Angle and lafft as he won aganst Eddie Guerrero. Benoit had alredy beetin Cha-

In injery nooz, Triple H is doin bettur after his throte injery from Survivor Series.

vo, hoo was interfeering in Angle's match.

Erly last week also saw two ov the Dudley's reunite for a tabel match with Jeff Hardy aganst Three Minute Warning.

Spike and Bubba Ray went on to win the match by slamming Rico thru a tabel. The memburs of Three Minute Warning were happy becuz they wernt uset to tabel matches and they did good. In injery nooz, Triple H is doin bettur after his throte injery from Survivor Series.

Rob Van Dam hit him in the throte with a frog splash and Triple H's throte, egan to swell. It started to cloze off his airway so he wuz given oxigin and taken to the hosspitle. He got out the next day and was at SmackDown! that nite.

To Hell With
U(sic)GA

Sports Opinion Bubba McDaniel

Dem Gators ain't good
I kant beleeye
we lost to Florida
dgin. We wer
suppost to win now
that Spurrier is gdm.
I don't understand.
We even had a close game aganst
Climpsun to start tha yeer, just like 1980. Wyy
kant we win aganst them Gaturrs.

Football Forecast Winners

Rounding out the final week of the 'Nique's Football Forecast, these are the bookies that got it right:

Matt Young
Brian Oxford
Winston Murdock
Jared Monroe

Corn Dawgs

from page 28

stalks grow until spring practice, so they can have the added bonus of using the rows for the football team's agility drills.

"I hate having to travel to Atlanta this year, but I think, in the long run, this little mishap is going to payoff," said Dawg head coach Mark Richt. "Osama's going to get hurt and my boys are going to get quicker."

Because of the success of the corn program, university officials intend to plant experimental beans and barley crops around the campus dormitories and dining halls. The baseball field is slated to become the home of a new variety of exploding squash. The experimental squash theoretically has a shelf-life of two months, which would supply an ample amount of time to ship it to Afghanistan.

However, a student, who wished to remain anonymous, said the squash needed much more development before being used for real governmental anti-terrorist operations.

"We are still working on the whole timing-thing with the squash. Just the other day we lost my brother-in-law's goat while he was nibbling on a three-week gourd," the student said. "It was tough to put old Sunshine in the ground. That goat was like family to us, know what I mean?"

In response, Georgia Tech's esteemed president, Wayne Clough, said, "I respect their effort to aid in the response to terrorism, but question their tactics. Have you ever heard of a Taliban obsession with sweet corn? Even if Osama does hanker for the good stuff, I'm not sure that the U(sic)GA girls will be able to resist chowing down on the cobs during the harvest. They don't call them the 'Dawgs' for nothing, ya know?"

"They don't call them the 'Dawgs' for nothing, ya know?"

Wayne Clough
Georgia Tech President

The game will be held at Bobby Dodd Stadium Nov. 30, with the tentative start time of 3:30 p.m. Due to the late change in venue, the Jackets will receive an extra $50,000 in penalty fees from U(sic)GA, as well as a written apology from the project research team.

Fortunately, Stinchcomb, the team leader, is on an accelerated English program, and has already started her Dr. Suess master's thesis and should be able to successfully pen a three-sentence apology letter to Tech.

"One sprout, two sprouts, we're sorry, there's no doubt," said Suzy as she rushed to class.

This unexpected last minute change will not affect the venue for next season, when the Jackets will host the Dawgs again.

Billboard of support for Terrance Edwards goes unnoticed

By Stevi Jo
A can write good

What would happen if you paid almost $600 for a billboard that no one could read? Nothing.

In Tennille last week, a U(sic)GA fan paid for a billboard that read “Thanks Terrence For 4 Great Years . . . The No. 1 WR in UGA History—The Fans.” Edwards, who dropped a crucial pass that helped the Florida Gators defeat the Bulldogs, needed the confidence boost. However, it is estimated that only 12 percent of University (sic) of Georgia grads are literate.

“I could see the Georgia logo, “ said devout fan and Georgia alums Steve Lomberg. “But that was really

“I paid for something I can’t even appreciate. Kind of like my college education,”

Johny Johnson
UGA Alumnus

it. My boss, a former Tech grad, had to tell me what it meant. What a waste of money.”

Many of the fans who helped pay for the a billboard are outraged. “I paid for something I can’t even appreciate,” said Johny Johnson. “Kind of like my college education,” said the Georgia alumnus.

The creators of the original billboard have decided to create a new thank you to Edwards. The sign will have only a picture of Edwards, a heart, and a picture of some red-clad UGA fans.

“What I am visinin’ is like some pic plus another makes something,” said Dave Berger, leader of the billboard clan. “However, I don’t really know how those symbol things work.”

By Stevi Jo / STUDENT PUBLICATIONS

A billboard of support for University [sic] of Georgia wide receiver Terrence Edwards was not readable by almost 88 percent of Dawgs fans.

www.nique.net

To Hell With Georgia!

Voice of the Dawgs takes over as Vocal Communications teacher

By Betty Ford
She knows good booze and news

A new speech class has hit the course listings for U(sic)GA students. A spokesperson for the Terry College of Business announced that the school has added Larry Munson, the long-time sports announcer for Dawg’s football, to their faculty roster.

Munson plans to teach a “Vocal Communications” class for the coming spring semester, and hopes to become a staple in the typical U(sic)GA education.

“I think these guys and girls need some help,” Munson said in an earlier interview. “I have been an expert at vocal communication for some time now, and I have never experienced anything like what I experience when I speak with a Georgia student. I don’t understand a word.”

Munson, a veteran announcer, is known to be the voice of southern football. He plans to teach the students how to enunciate and successfully pronounce words that typically would be quite hard for a

“I have never experienced anything like what I experience when I speak with a Georgia student. I don’t understand a word.”

Larry Munson
 Voice of the Dawgs

U(sic)GA student to use in their daily vocabulary.

“This is going to be quite hard for me,” Munson said. “The students can hardly read, much less speak, so I feel like a Hooked-on-Phonics teacher right now.”

He plans to attack the obstacles with the aid of Dick and Jane books, as well as Winnie-the-Pooh selections and Berenstain Bears books.

“You know, I never thought I would have to do this,” Munson commented. “I love the Dawgs. I mean I love them to death. I would never, ever miss a game. But I often think those boys should stick to attempting to play football, and leave the learning to the North Avenue Trade School folks. But I am happy to help out my school in any way possible.”

The class roster for Munson is a bit touchy though. He didn’t quite expect a few of the faces he saw on registration day.

“The first one in line was Musa.

I was surprised, mainly because I thought he was a pretty smart kid. Honestly, I had never talked to him before, but then when he opened his mouth, I understood why he

“I often think those boys should stick to attempting to play football, and leave the learning to [Tech].”

Larry Munson
 Voice of the Dawgs

was in my class,” Munson said.

The class is listed as VocCom 1101 and will be offered Monday, Wednesday, and Friday from 1 to 2 p.m. The administration and faculty decided on this time due to student feedback as to when would be the optimal time for them to actually come to class.

“Not before the afternoon,” an anonymous student-athlete said. “I usually drink and play some of that there strip poker all night long, so, you know, the last thing I want to do is get up for a 10 o’clock class.”

“This is gonna be a good class- I listen to Mr. Larry all the time. He is the man. He talks a lot, but if he gets paid to do that, then I want to talk a lot too. I am really pumped about the guy helping us, he is definitely my hero. My daddy loves him. My momma loves him. Even my brother-in-law listens to the man. I think this is gonna help me become a graduate. I can’t wait to go to class in the spring. This will be the first class I have gone to in two years.”