THE GEORGIA INSTITUTE OF TECHNOLOGY

College of Management removes DuPree's name

Michael Hagearty
Institute Communications and Public Affairs

Georgia Tech's College of Management will no longer carry the name of one of its biggest benefactors. Effective immediately, the DuPree name will no longer be a part of the title of the College.

At issue is the balance of a $25 million endowment made in 1996 by restaurant entrepreneur and alumnus Tom DuPree, who recently confirmed he would be unable to meet the prescribed payment schedule.

In a statement, President Wayne Clough wrote, "At a time when Tech is completing fundraising for our new $45 million building at Technology

Square, securing the future financial stability of our business school is imperative. Fundraising for the building recently received a major boost, in the form of a $15 million challenge grant (see related story, below) that would complete the funding for the new building and begin building an endowment for the College.

"With this in mind and in consideration of the future, the issue of the unfulfilled pledge has become problematic."

Officially, the College will be known as the Georgia Tech College of Management.

Expressing "the utmost respect" for DuPree, Clough said this decision was the result of long discussions,

Sam Nunn to receive Ivan Allen Jr. Prize for Progress and Service

Elizabeth Campell
Institute Communications and Public Affairs

The Ivan Allen College of Liberal Arts will honor Sam Nunn, co-chairman and chief executive officer of the Nuclear Threat Initiative (NTI) and former U.S. Senator, with the 2004 Ivan Allen Jr. Prize for Progress and Service on March 22 at 1 p.m. Following the award presentation, Senator Nunn will give a keynote address about "America's Security Challenges."

Nunn joins past recipients of the Prize: U.S. Sen. Zell Miller in 2001, President Jimmy Carter in 2002, and syndicated columnist Molly Ivins in 2003. The program takes place at the Georgia Tech Hotel and Conference Center ballroom. Faculty, staff and students are invited to attend.

The College will also present for the first time three new Ivan Allen Jr. Legacy Awards. Sponsored by Ivan Allen Workspace, the new awards honor the memory of Ivan Allen Jr., (1911-2003), Atlanta's legendary former mayor, businessman and Tech alumnus, who served as mayor from 1962-70. The Legacy Awards will be awarded to one student, one faculty member and one alumnus who exemplify the qualities for which Ivan Allen was known.

In addition, Ivan Allen College celebrates its Founder's Day on March 22 by presenting two panel discussions. The morning panel on "A Retrospective Look at the Mayoralty of Ivan Allen Jr." will take place at

Donor launches $15 million challenge to fund, endow Tech's business school

Marla Edwards
Institute Communications and Public Affairs

An anonymous donor has launched a $15 million challenge to inspire other Georgia Tech supporters. This challenge grant will help the College of Management accelerate the private funding of its new home at Technology Square and lay a foundation for increased faculty, student and programmatic support.

The anonymous donor will match gifts to the Georgia Tech Foundation, designated for the College of Management, for unrestricted use. Gifts and pledges fulfilled by June 2007 will qualify for the one-to-one matching dollars.

"This generous challenge commitment offers us the opportunity, with the help of others who will match the gift, to complete the funding of our dramatic new Management Building at Technology Square," said President Wayne Clough. "Closure on this obligation will place our College of Management in position to focus its future efforts towards shaping the technology-related programs that will distinguish us from the rest of the pack. The possibilities that lie ahead of this College are remarkable, and taking advantage of them will quickly bring its reputation in line with that of our outstanding College of Engineering.

"Our anonymous donor shares with us an appreciation for the potential that lies ahead and joins in our commitment to seize this window of opportunity," Clough added.

Because the donor wants to remain anonymous now and in the future, participants whose gifts receive matching funds will get facility-naming recognition for the full amount — their gift combined with the dollar-for-dollar match.

Terry Blum, dean of the College of Management, believes management alumni will come forward to meet this challenge. "Our alumni have been very successful in the world of business, and I believe they will meet this challenge head-on and push us over the top in our effort to complete funding of our state-of-the-art new building," Blum said. "I'm truly excited about what this challenge represents, and I'm grateful to this anonymous donor for coming forward."

Gifts to the new Management Building will support more than just bricks and mortar, Blum added. "This building is our laboratory for preparing business leaders for future changing technological environments. It's what goes on inside the building that is truly important," she said. "Gifts allow us to focus on our faculty and students, who represent the true competitive advantage for achieving visibility and recognition."

“QUOTE— UNQUOTE”

“You’re talking about a course over very rough roads and open desert. I would have trouble driving some of these roads myself. I think it’s beyond the capabilities of autonomous vehicles today.”

Library explores the cultural impact of Frankenstein

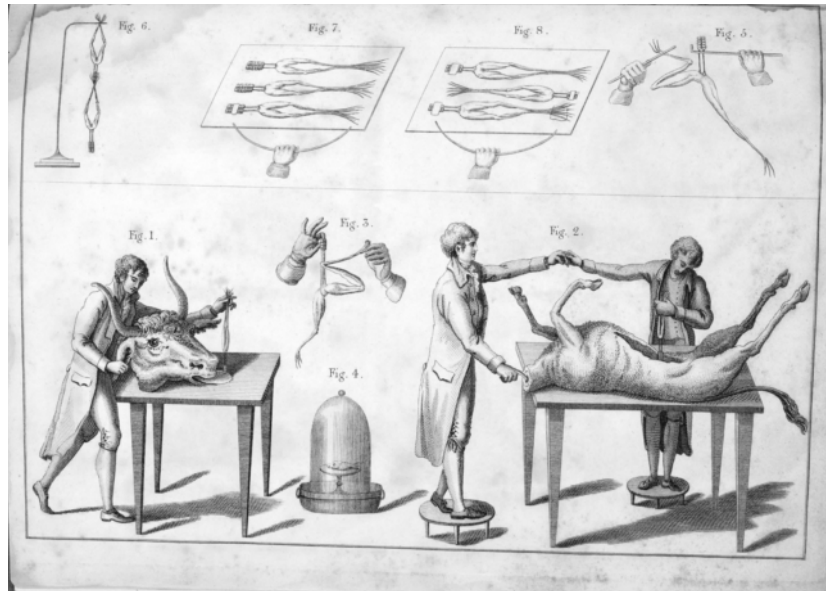

Sean Selman
Institute Communications
and Public Affairs

An exhibit hosted in the Library and Information Center this spring examines the transformation of Mary Shelley’s classic monster from a literary marvel into a cultural phenomenon — and how that feat relates to the ongoing debate over ethics and the pursuit of science.

The free exhibit, “Frankenstein: Penetrating the Secrets of Nature,” runs March 17-April 30 in the Library’s Neely Gallery from 10 a.m.-5 p.m. Mondays through Saturdays and noon-5 p.m. Sundays.

“This exhibition offers a fresh look at Mary Shelley’s remarkable life and the evolution of her classic novel, ‘Frankenstein,’ since its publication in 1818,” Records Coordinator Kirk Henderson said. “The traveling exhibition shows how playwrights, filmmakers and the media have transformed Mary Shelley’s saga into one of the Western world’s most enduring myths.”

Georgia Tech also will host a speaker and film series to coincide with the traveling exhibit. Sara Karloff — the daughter of Boris Karloff, who portrayed Frankenstein’s monster in several classic films — will introduce “The Bride of Frankenstein” at 7 p.m. on April 19 in the Student Center Theater. Ms. Karloff will speak on her father’s legacy in film before the movie begins.

Above, illustrations from a book written in 1803 by Italian physician Giovanni Aldini, who administered electricity to the bodies of decapitated animals and humans to produce twitching and other physical movements. Mary Shelley was well aware of “galvanism” when she wrote “Frankenstein.”

Overall, “Frankenstein: Penetrating the Secrets of Nature” examines how Frankenstein’s abuse of science and his failure to take responsibility for his actions after reanimating a monstrous being is the direct result of his ambition and idealism — human emotions that later lead to revenge and forgiveness.

“The exhibition also addresses issues such as cloning and genetic engineering, which raise difficult questions about the nature of human identity,” Henderson said. “The story of Frankenstein — as myth and as metaphor — can help the public articulate and examine these fears.”

University System of Georgia.

In association with the exhibit,
the School of Literature, Communication and Culture will host three speakers who will discuss Mary Shelley and the influence of her work. Among the scheduled speakers are:

Kathleen Goonan
Thursday, March 18, 4 p.m.
Clary Theater

Goonan is a science fiction author who has employed a post-modern interpretation of the Frankenstein myth in some of her work. Among her books are “Queen City Jazz,” a British Science Fiction Association Award finalist, and “The Bones of Time,” a Clarke Award finalist.

Anne Mellor
Wednesday, March 24, 4 p.m.
“Mothering Monsters — Mary Shelley’s Frankenstein”
Clary Theater

Mellor, a Shelley scholar at the University of California, Los Angeles, is author of “Mary Shelley: Her Life, Her Fiction, Her Monsters and Romanticism and Gender.” She has edited Shelley’s major writings and addresses Shelley’s relationship to science and technology.

Irving “Bud” Foote
Monday, March 29, 2 p.m.
“The Monster is Like a Red, Red Rose”
Ferst Room, Library and Information Center

In the early 1970s, Professor Emeritus Bud Foote developed one of the nation’s first university-level science-fiction

courses in the School of Literature, Communication and Culture. He also is the founder of the Bud Foote Science Fiction Collection, currently housed in the Georgia Tech Library Archives.

10 a.m. in the Global Learning and Conference Center, room 236. Participants for the morning panel include: Ronald H. Bayor, professor of history in the School of History, Technology and Society and founding and current editor of the Journal of American Ethnic History; Paul Hemphill, co-author of Ivan Allen's autobiography entitled Mayor: Notes on the Sixties; Georgia A. Persons, professor of political science in the School of Public Policy; and Clarence Stone, research professor of public policy and political science at George Washington University. Andy Ambrose, deputy director and chief operating officer of the Atlanta History Center, will moderate the panel.

The afternoon discussion on "The Impact of Terrorism on Society: Global Perspectives" at 2:30 p.m. in the Global Learning and Conference Center, room 236, features a diverse panel of international experts including Gilles Andreani, head of policy planning for the French Foreign Ministry; Uday Bhaskar, deputy director of India's Institute of Defense Studies and Analysis; Lawrence Papay, a vice president at the Science Applications International Corporation, San Diego; and Robert Ursano, chair of the Department of Psychiatry at the Uniformed Services University of the Health Sciences, Bethesda, Md. Susan Cozzens, a professor in the School of Public Policy, will moderate.

Honoring Nunn

As co-chairman and chief executive officer of NTI, Nunn works to reduce the global threats from nuclear, biological and chemical weapons. He brings to this mission his extensive experience as a U.S. Senator from Georgia for 24 years (1972-1996).

During his tenure in the U.S. Senate, Nunn served as chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee and the Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations. He also served on the Intelligence and Small Business Committees. His legislative achievements include the landmark Department of Defense Reorganization Act, drafted with the late Senator Barry Goldwater, and the Nunn-Lugar Cooperative Threat Reduction Program, which provides assistance to Russia and the former Soviet republics for securing and destroying their excess nuclear, biological and chemical weapons.

In addition to his work with NTI, Nunn has continued his service in the public policy arena as a distinguished professor in the Sam Nunn School of International Affairs and as chairman of the board of the Center for Strategic and International Studies in Washington, D.C.

Raised in Perry, Georgia, Nunn attended Georgia Tech, Emory University and Emory Law School, where he graduated with honors in 1962. After active duty service in the U.S. Coast Guard, he served six years in the U.S. Coast Guard Reserve. He first entered politics as a member of the Georgia House of Representatives in 1968.

Ivan Allen College is named for the late Ivan Allen Jr., who represented the essence of "the new South" and, among other things, is credited with helping ease racial tensions in Atlanta during his two terms as mayor. Each year in March — coinciding with Mayor Allen's birthday — the College honors its namesake by presenting the Ivan Allen Jr. Prize for Progress and Service to a distinguished public figure.

but indicated it was a necessary step in continuing to advance the College's prestige. Clough pointed out that DuPree has contributed $5.7 million to the Institute, and funded nearly 200 scholarships for students and teachers from his home of Morgan County.

"In today's highly competitive business school environment, private support is a necessity, not a luxury," he wrote. "Private support can make the difference between a solid business program and a truly outstanding one.

"Our ultimate goal is to insure that the College has the resources needed to educate the technologically astute business leaders of the future."

Media outlets have reported that Avado Brands, the company founded by DuPree more than 20 years ago, experienced significant financial difficulties over the past several years. He resigned as its chairman and chief executive officer last November, and the company is currently under Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection.

In a letter to Clough, DuPree has said he still intends to fulfill his pledge at a future date. Clough announced that Tech will establish a scholarship program in DuPree's name for students from Morgan County to attend Georgia Tech.

IN BRIEF:

Alumni calls for faculty presenters

The Alumni Association invites faculty interested in making presentations to campus visitors during Family Weekend and Homecoming 2004 to submit their names, contact information and topic areas for presentations before April 2.

During Homecoming 2003, nearly 200 alumni and their families, plus Institute staff and students, attended 13 faculty-led presentations on topics such as "Building Consensus Between Palestinians and Israelis," "Georgia Tech in the War on Cancer," and "Artificial Intelligence in Interactive Drama and Art."

"Great universities have great faculty members and great alumni," said Joe Irwin, executive director of the Alumni Association. "These annual seminars allow us to showcase the work done by our great faculty, and it's one of the important ways we fulfill our mission to our alumni and to the Institute."

This year's seminars are planned as part of Homecoming events on Oct. 15. Also, due to their popularity among alumni, additional seminars are planned for Family Weekend on Oct. 1. For more information or to volunteer as a presenter, call 385-1095 or e-mail karla.ruggiero@alumni.gatech.edu.

Baines nominated for top information security executive

For the second year in a row, Director of Information Security Herbert Baines has been nominated for the Information Security Executive of the Year in Georgia Award, honoring excellence in managing enterprise-wide network and Internet security systems. On March 18, he will join the other nominees at a banquet celebrating their efforts.

Baines joined Tech in 1994 and has worked in a variety of roles. Most recently, he initiated and steered efforts resulting in Georgia Tech being designated as an Information Security Center of Academic Excellence in Information Assurance Education by the National Security Agency and participated in the development of a wireless security model for the Institute, and a service and security model for the Georgia Tech Regional Engineering Program.

Pi Mile Road Race

The Alumni Association's 32nd Annual Pi Mile Road Race will be held on Saturday, March 27, at 8 a.m. The 5-kilometer run will wind through campus, and the first 500 registrants will receive a commemorative shirt. Following the race, runners can enjoy food, drink, mini massages and door prizes. For more information, contact event coordinator Kate Pientka at 894-7085 or visit www.gtalumni.org/pimile.
