

faces in the pasture

by missy butt

Yandel Jones
Senior-Football

An eighth-year senior from Valdosta, GA, Yandel Jones is a defensive back who doesn't see much playing time for the Dawgs because of his recent academic ineligibility. Yandel is the son of Delmont and Betty Rae Jones and believes he has at least one brother and one sister that he knows about.

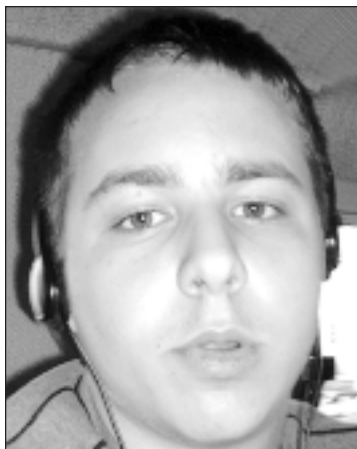

He is a Physical Education major and enjoys playing games on his Play Station II in his spare time. He lists his favorite food as "his momma's road kill pate." Yandel says if he had a million dollars, he would "buy his momma a new trailer" and have "fried chicken every night and nekkid ladies feeding it to me in a hot tub." Yandel lists Ric Flare and Triple H as his role models because they "throw down like bad-asses because everybody knows that wrestlin' is a real sport and we should respect them boys."

Cletus Gibbs
Freshman- Men's Basketball

Cletus Gibbs, the 6-7, 225-lb. freshman power forward for the Dawgs would be a big contributor for head coach Dennis Felton's team, but will not be playing in the next ten games for making more than $500 from selling textbooks and school supplies, a violation of NCAA rules. Cletus, who was a highly touted incoming high school senior, was among the selected few survivors in Georgia's basketball program.

Cletus, the son of Petunia and Enus Gibbs, is a Sanitation major who plans to work for his uncle's portable toilet company, Big John for Your Little John, upon graduation. Gibbs ranks CaddyShack as his favorite film, fried chicken as his favorite food, and said his favorite thing about attending UGA is "how much free stuff they give me. I ain't never gotta buy clothes, food, or cars again."

Billy Bob Bennett
Senior-Bowling

Billy Bob Bennett, the 5-8, 165-pound native of Athens, is the leader of the Dawgs's varsity bowling team. More notoriously, Bennett is known for having completed four strikes in a game after downing three liters of beer and completing a keg stand just before the fourth strike.

He lists hunting, fishing, cow tipping, drag racing, and shooting stray cats as his favorite pastimes. Bennett is a fast food industry major and plans to work at a McDonald's drive thru upon graduation. He lists his favorite food as "meat" and if he had a million dollars, he said he would buy a new truck and retire so that he would "never have to work again." Billy Bob says that Michael Jackson is his role models because of Jackson's ability to relate to people of all ages and races and still be cool enough to get fan support even from inside jail.

Cow tippin' squad prepares for Nationals

By Ilova Alcki
Bring me some dat Jim Bean

After months of hard work and dedication, U[sic]GA's nationally-ranked cow tippin' squad is heading to the national championships.

Now for those of you not familiar with the sport or if you're a Yankee, here's how the sport works- whichever team can tip as many cows as possible in ten minutes win.

Now for you PETA activists, don't worry, there's no danger involved. Each team has to supply their own method of getting the cow back up immediately after tipping.

"Ya know we usually make our new members put the cows back upright. We care about them animals and want them to be safe. We love our cows, they're our lifetime companions," said Benny Beenabaddabing, a dairy science major.

Before the squad could qualify for the nationals, it first faced a difficult task- defeating arch rivals Georgia Southern and Clemson. "Southern has professional cow tippers on their team, why those people have nothing better to do than get laid, tip cows. We have real classes at our school. My milking lab is harder than anything them Statesboro people have to do," said Beenabaddabing.

At the Southern meet, the Dawgs went in with a low morale.

"We had just been defeated by them damn Florida pussies. I mean whoda thought that some damn yankee could lick us? We're a whole lot more redneck true and true than those Gator jackasses could ever hope to be," Ima Reddyneck, one of the Dawgs' star players.

When the cow bell rang, the Dawgs sprung into action. Tipping an amazing six cows compared to the Eagles' paltry three cows in the first round, the team got a ten point advantage early on over the Eagles.

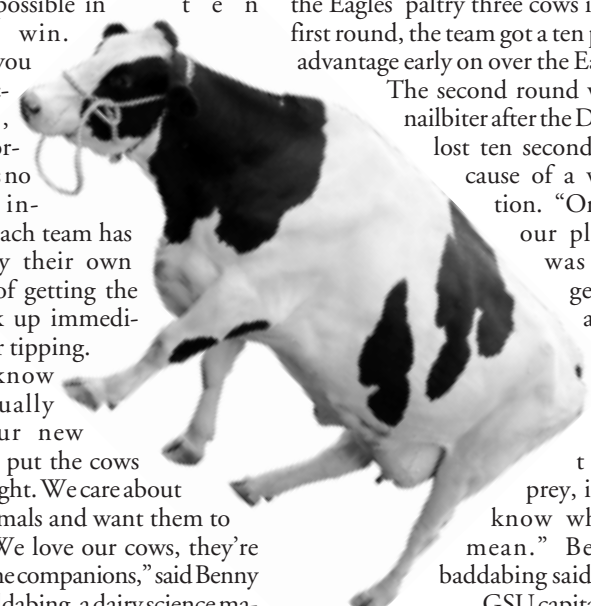

The second round was a nailbiter after the Dawgs lost ten seconds because of a violation.

"One of our players was um getting a bit frisky with one of the prey, if you know what I mean." Beenabaddabing said.

GSU capitalized on the penalty and evened up the score. However in the last round, GSU fell behind after one of the cows fell on the Eagles' team captain.

With added confidence and moonshine in their veins, the Dawg tippers went into the Clemson meet roaring and ready to go. "We knew we could lick them kitties." said Beenabaddabing.

The Dawgs swept all three rounds with the Tigers. The team will head to the Nationals Dec. 4.

sliver box

I am a democrat...and i will be the devil's advocate...." republican's make me laugh" ...but so do democrats.
why are tech guys such women sometimes?
When I love something it turns to MONKEEEEEEEY AHHH!!! MOTHERLAND!
...can't seem to pray the gay away
GOODTIMES
Anagrams! Clemson graduate: cant measure gold
Georgia graduate: garage grout aide
Duke University grad: derisive gaudy trunk
Asking students how they feel about Georgia Tech is like asking lamp posts how they feel about dogs.
How can we have the #1 systems engineering department in the nation and have so many broken systems...
Maintenance, you 'ignant' sons-of-...stop fuing with da A/C
THE DOORS ARE ATTACKING ME!!! AGGHHH!
Uh, sorry Maintenance folks. Good Job turning it back on in time.
so I was wrong...shame on Tech for the dumpsters!
The best part of a lollipop is eating the stick.
That's stupid.
bored, bored, bored
to whoever slashed all the bike tires in Perry Hall, please do the world a favor and put a gun in your mouth.
Your mom says hi! She told me to tell you hello!
The following is a song for a girl: Smile that smile again for me. Look at me, yeah just that way. Take me back where I'm safe from, these thoughts that I think everyday. You're the one who has th being more is what you mean to me. So take my hand and lead me, I'll follow wherever you go. Take me down your road tonight, The one I pray I may know.
Why is it that I can't think about anything else but her?? Why does she talk to me!! AAAHHHH!!! I WANT YOU SO BAD!
"To avoid criticism, do nothing, say nothing, and be nothing."

More sliver on page 23

Beyond the Red and Black

Big Jim

page 24

GENTLEMEN START YOUR ENJINS! NASCAR IS DA BEST SPORT! I IS A BIG RICHARD PETTY FAN. I BAVE HIZ BOOK BUT CAN'T READ IT. I SURE DUZ LOVE TO LOOK AT THE PICTUREZ THO. I CANN WAT TIL SUNDAY. DALE IZ GUNNA WOOP THE HOL BUNCH OV EM. I DRINK BUD CUZ OV DALE.

M.B.: Coach, just for the record, how many lies have you told over the years?

J.H.: 38,754. Give or take a couple. You got any vodka?

M.B.: No.

J.H.: [Expletive].

M.B.: Coach, what has been your most memorable moment off the court?

J.H.: Sexually harassing that young lady while I was the coach at Rhode Island is something I'll never forget. Actually, Muddy, I think that whole situation was blown out of proportion.

I simply asked her if she'd like to find out why they call me Big "Swinging Pendulum" Jim, followed by a slight grabbing of her buttocks. I mean, I thought this was America! When was free speech ruled unconstitutional?

M.B.: So Coach, do you want to go back to coaching in college one day?

J.H.: Hell yeah, whoo doggie, the finest pieces of ass in the world are college girls. Aint' nothing like them Georgia peaches though.

M.B.: Marvelous. Lastly coach, how are you enjoying your new capacity with the NBA's Denver Nuggets?

J.H.: It's a pretty sweet gig, Muddy. I get to travel to many a college campus and scout some great athletes. My job also allows me to frequent sorority houses across the country for some rockin' parties. While I was on a trip to Iowa State a couple of weeks ago, I woke up one morning following a party with nothing on but my bikini style leopard underwear with a whip in my hand. Haha! That was a wild night.

M.B.: Thanks for your time, coach.

J.H.: You bet, Muddy. Let me know next time you're in town and I'll treat you to some girls.

Learn the secret to Dawgs success

By Jacques Strape
I have a rash

How do they do it? The Georgia Bulldogs have fought their way to the top of the pile, but what gets them there?

Some would say that it is the hard physical training and great team camaraderie that pushes this team to be its best.

When asked about the Bulldogs physical regimen quarterback David Greene responded, "Yeah, we like physical activity. It usually starts on the field but becomes a real bonding experience in the showers. Even the coaches join in, especially if it is the rookies first time – practicing, that is."

Even Head Coach Mark Richt speaks highly of his team's training.

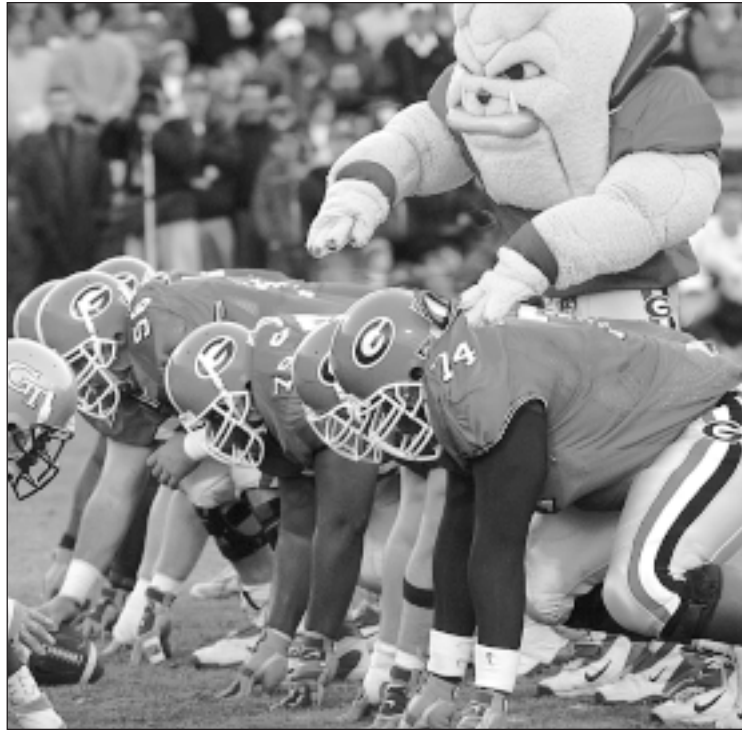

"You mean the steroids we give 'em. Yeah, you got to love steroids," says Richt. "I mean, some of the boys love them so much you would think they were addicted to them or something."

Still others say it is the Bulldog's quick minds, and intelligence that makes them a threat on the field. This year's class averages an overall school best of 850 on the SAT's with a 1.8 GPA.

"The first few years were tough," says Richt. "But then we just created some bogus classes for the kids to 'go' to and gave them grades based on their attendance. I just tell their parents that they are getting 'the best Georgia has to offer'."

"We are still students here at Georgia," says one player. "Athletes go on to receive degrees in a wide range of majors from Public Policy, and Communications, to... Public Policy... Oh, wait. Did I already say that? Well, I'll be damned then."

Though alumni and fans alike protest that it is the Bulldog's sense of school loyalty and legacy that makes Georgia such a force. Indeed,

By Billy Bobo/ NOT STUDENT PUBLICATIONS

Over the past year, Georgia's football team has engaged in many activities to boost performance on the field. Georgia's starting QB has morphed into a super-powered Harry the Dawg after "vitamin" use.

the support Georgia receives from its loyal base makes it a great program.

One legacy athlete says, "Knowing that my Mom, and Dad, and wife, I mean, sister are watching me play every Saturday from the farm, well, it just gives me that little extra incentive to give it my all. I want to show my little nephew, I mean, son that his Dad, I mean, Uncle... or wait, did I get that backwards?"

However, the critics and spectators seem to feel that it is the attitude and standard that Head Coach Mark Richt brings to the Bulldogs that make them the one of the best in the nation, and with only three losses under his belt, how can one not agree?

It makes any person wonder what his secret to success is.

"Well that is something that will go with me to the grave," snickers Richt.

"It is a play that you don't see all that often on Saturdays, but I've given it the codename 'bribing the guys in white and black stripped shirts'. It has won me more than my fair share of games, mind you."

Of course, the school fight songs know the truth. It is the red, black and white that have won the bulldogs every game this season, and will continue to guide them into the future.

"Lycra and spandex are great to wear on the field," says running back Kregg Lumpkin. "But off the field only DKNY touches this fine Queen's ass!...mmmmmm-hmm... <snap>."

Hard classes ahead for student athletes

By Dougie Howsa
Power to the Bulldawg Nation

U[sic]GA has made significant changes to their basket weaving department after his past Spring's revelations that athletes were allowed to complete courses without ever attending class. Several athletes stated they were unaware they were even enrolled in several of the courses, but said they did not complain when they received A's for their "work."

Many of the classes were taught by assistant coaches or U[sic]GA die-hard fans.

"It was the first A I had done gotten, so I didn't say nothing" said one basketball player.

The most profound changes include now taking a written exam as a grade in the class. This is seen as the change that will be the toughest for the athletes to handle. Before this semester, athletes in the class could pass by performing a variety of tasks including arm-wrestling the coaches and by winning burping contests.

Many of the assistants have been replaced when the changes were implemented this summer. The department foolishly scheduled one of the written exams the week of the LSU, which U[sic]GA ended up losing.

One defensive back blamed a headache from the exam for his poor performance in the game.

The changes may be more affecting other sports such as basketball, though. One newcomer to the team has put on 30 pounds because he says he "studies too much now."

Coach Felton has had to do extra conditioning drills for his incoming freshmen who have already put on the "freshman 15." U[sic]GA was forming a solid recruiting class last season until the changes were made public. Several recruits decided to go elsewhere, stating that they did not want to be distracted from basketball by tough school-work.

Non-athletes welcome the change because they believe it will give their basket weaving degrees more respect. U[sic]GA has one of the lowest rated basket weaving departments and has been desperately seeking ideas to improve their program.

"We have had 10 straight graduating classes with no one able to find a job," says one professor in the department. "A lot has to do with the fact that the Athletic Department lobbied to get assistant coaches in here to teach introductory level classes in the past."

This summer the GPA in basket weaving classes with athletes present plummeted to a record low. Department officials hope that they can steadily improve the study skills of the athletes by showing them how valuable these classes will be to them after football.

"Before this semester, athletes in the class could pass by performing a variety of tasks including arm-wrestling the coaches and by winning burping contests."

sliver box

"Love takes off masks that we fear we cannot live without and know we cannot live within."

"Sometimes the heart sees what is invisible to the eye."

"Woe to the man whose heart has not learned while young to hope, to love - and to put its trust in life."

"You will find as you look back upon your life that the moments when you have truly lived are the moments when you have done things in the spirit of love."

"Looking back, I have this to regret, that too often when I loved, I did not say so."

I won't make that mistake.....this semester will not end before I try!!! WISH ME LUCK!!

I made my "kitty" mad by throwing it out That's like buying a haircut for Adolf Hitler! And I hate Adolf Hitler! I like his haircut, but that's IT!

Take A Picture With Adam and Eoin ROCKS! Those guys are the coolest ... Check 'em out Friday afternoons.

Goofus and Gallant ... the movie. The first must-see film of the year. Now Showing: <http://www.prism.gatech.edu/~dohhafwd/>

So how did our blood battle with UGA go? Oh, that's right. NOBODY CARES.

Watching people camp out for UGA/GT tickets is the funniest thing I've seen all month. Thanks, folks.

Canada Kicks Ass...well Vancouver does at least because they understand hockey and they make it their religion

Who will win between Michigan and Ohio State this week? Michigan! Who will be national champions? The "real" USC damn it...you heard it here first...USC Trojans WILL be National Champs

Here's the official major for all those females looking to get their MRS degree from Tech...Domestic Engineering

"Tolerant" people absolutely cannot stand intolerance.

No sliver published this week...why waste our time submitting them?

georgia tech's campus is terrible

Let us all hold a vigil for Michael Jackson for the music he brought us, not for the boys he has molested

BALLIN'

THWUGA • Tuesday, November 25, 2003

NASCAR baby

Here in Athens, we love ourselves some cars. Read what we think about those boys who grace the tv. Page 22

Whew doggie!

The Dawgs have a new tool to help improve performance on the field. Find out what Richt's boys are up to. Page 23

by the numbers

760

Average SAT score of this year's football team. It's a whole ten points up from last year's class. Recruiting tools like free access to Georgia girls, playstations in the locker rooms and improved strength of the basket-weaving and turf management classes contributed to the increase.

1

Number of classes a U[sic]GA student athlete is required to attend each week. Attendance is taken once a week to comply with the strict standards set for student athletes. Regular students usually don't attend any.

6

Number of athletes on the football and basketball teams who can speak in complete sentences during interviews with the media. Mandatory grammar classes are required for team captains in football and basketball.

16

Number of points Florida scored in its win against Georgia at this year's contest in Jacksonville. The Dawgs scored 13 points in the loss against the victorious Gators.

20,814

Average number of fans at Sanford Stadium who actually attended U[sic]GA. Over half of the fans at football games have never set foot in a classroom on campus.

0.201

Average blood alcohol content of a Dawg fan at halftime. Despite Sanford Stadium's lack of alcohol at concession stands, fans still manage to have a roarin' good ole time between the hedges during TV breaks.

on the fields

Event	Date
Whooping at Bobby Dodd	11/29
Mudbogging at Truitt	12/2
Cow tippin' Nationals	12/4
Whiffleball at Auburn	12/8
Monster Truck Rally	12/5
Redneck Nationals	12/23
Quailhunting at Darion	12/20

Adams replaces UGA VI with Goat

By Bubba Franks
Hmm....donuts

That dam Michael Adams had done it again. First Adams got rid of Vince Dooley now he's decided not to renew Uga VI's contract. Adams announced his decision after the Kentucky game.

Adams decided that the athletics department needs new blood lines on the field.

"It's time to put Uga VI out to pasture. Uga VI served us well but we need a new thing to motivate fans. We should get back to tradition and go back to the Goat. Our Dairy Science department has developed the ultimate fighting goat. 'Goat II' will bring Georgia Athletics back to its glory," Adams said.

Adams came up with the idea after seeing a picture of "The Goat" at Georgia's first football game against Auburn. "Nothing scared Auburn fans more than the billy goat in those days. We need an SEC championship and to do that, we need an intimidating mascot," Adams said.

When asked for comment, Uga VI barked furiously and later broke down into tears. Early in his career, Uga VI had faced serious depression. He was despondent when his weight ballooned to 55 pounds, 10 pounds heavier than his father, Uga V. Uga VI had turned to drugs, as reported in the 2001 To Hell with Georgia issue.

After a lengthy rehab stay following the 2001 football season, where Uga VI was fed dogfood laced with methadone, Uga VI was placed on probation. The dog's probation ended three months ago. Uga VI had expected a contract renewal if he remained clean.

Ever since Uga VI kicked his drug habit, he had seemed to be back into good spirits, even happily fighting Aubie the Tiger.

"It's just so sad what they're doing to poor Uga VI. I don't want to give any more money to this school until Adams changed his mind. Uga VI is my idol, my hero, my world. Why Georgia isn't Georgia without its beloved bulldog," said Mary-Lou Higgins, a cheerleader for the Red and Black.

One of the reasons Adams changed to the goat is cost.

"We have a whole department dedicated to making goats. It'll be so easy to have subs for games. If one dies, we can just go down the road for a new one instead of worrying about Uga VI's ability to breed. He's not getting any younger and he's not making babies as fast as he once did," Adams said.

Goat II will be unveiled in the 2004 Football opener. The goat will wear a red and black outfit to each

"I don't want that goat anywhere near my grass. Adams can stick his goat up you know where," said an anonymous SEC athletic director.

Fans have begun protests. Buck "Sugar" Cook dropped 20 doggy bones on Adams's doorstep. "I thought about dropping 100 but I only have 10 fingers and 10 toes. I had to do something. I hate goats, dang it, I don't even drink goat milk and goat cheese? Phew that's for them city folks," Cook said.

home game. Adams's announcement had raised protests from other schools as well. Other schools' goats have been known to chew and eat grass and turf.

Athletics Director Vince Dooley has also announced plans to hold an investigation to what he calls "a left-wing conspiracy designed to overthrow Uga VI."

Students will hold a sit in at Sanford Stadium Dec. 4. Anyone who wants to attend can and participants are asked to wear "dawg heads" and red and black.

Q&A with "swinging" Jim Harrick

By Muddy Buckles
Chugging along

Former UGA basketball coach Jim Harrick, now a pro scout for the NBA's Denver Nuggets, sits down with To Hell with Georgia's Muddy Buckles to discuss his tumultuous college coaching career as well as his transition to the pro game. Harrick left UGA in a blaze of scandal after a few unscrupulous actions by him and his coaching staff were revealed to the public.

M.B.: Coach, thanks for taking the time to talk with us.

J.H.: Yeah, yeah. Let's make this fast. I'm dealing with a laundry list of lawsuits right now.

M.B.: First off coach, Georgia took a chance on you in 1999 despite your troubled past. Why did you feel Athens was the right place for you?

J.H.: Well, from an athletics standpoint, you can get away with murder there. Georgia's multiple NCAA infractions during Vince Dooley's tenure were extremely attractive to me, and I was initially blown away by their willingness to break the rules.

It was an atmosphere conducive to weaving one of my many trademark webs of deceit. The nightlife is also a plus. Even an older guy like me can get lucky there (chuckles). I felt it was a perfect fit.

M.B.: Your son, Jim, Jr., took a lot of heat for the NCAA sanctions resulting from the accusations of one of your former players, Tony Cole. Did you feel remorse for him initially being pegged as the culpable party in the whole fiasco?

Special to THWUGA

Last spring, Jim Harrick went down fast in the wake of a crippling scandal. He was accused of several NCAA infractions. His son also improperly taught a class in basketball techniques to several basketball players.

J.H.: Nah, Jim's a big boy. I feel I did my best to take him under my wing at a young age. Jim has been privy to many a scheme of mine before they even came to their ultimate fruition over the years. I'm very proud of the shameless liar he has become. It's just too bad I had to lose my job, too. Jim's currently pursuing a job in the pornography industry, and my wife and I couldn't be happier. He's a Harrick through and through.

See Big Jim, page 22

sports shorts

Cocks destroy bushes in break-in Last Monday, a group of angry Gamecock fans broke into Sanford Stadium and set fire to the beloved hedges that line the stadium. The motivation behind the break-in was the devastating loss the Cocks suffered at the hands of the Dawgs this season.

President Michael Adams called the crime an outrage. "Leave our bushes alone," Adams said. Adams demanded that the University of South Carolina pay to regrow the hedges and install a state of the art security system to prevent future theft. South Carolina has declined comment.

Sanford Stadium to sell alcohol

After months of student and alumni protests, the Board of Regents has decided to allow the sale of alcohol in Sanford Stadium. The measure is designed to enhance the tailgating and fan experience at Sanford.

With the measure, U[sic]GA hopes to best LSU and become the No. 1 destination for college football fans. Alcohol sales are expected to double the athletic department's yearly revenue, as the average fan consumes four beers per game.