FINAL REPORT

GCATT SEED GRANT

This was a project funded jointly to the University of Georgia and Georgia Tech. Georgia Tech contribution was intended to be a minor one. We basically assisted in a consulting role to the main effort at the University of Georgia. The main goal of the Georgia Tech effort was to inspect and review the usability of the teacher video scanning system. My role was to evaluate and make recommendations on the user interface to the system used by teachers to review and categorize video clips of the activities in their classes.

I was initially introduced to the system via the teleconferencing facilities at the University of Georgia and Georgia Tech. After this initial encounter with the system, its purpose, and some of its functionality, I went to the University of Georgia in order to use the system for inspection purposes. In general, the interface was very well designed. I suggested corrections in some areas of layout design. In some cases the placement of objects needed improvement or the way lists were ordered needed to be reversed. There were minor problems with some of the labeling. The interaction and the navigation were very well designed relative to the functionality of the system.
